Note to reader

All care is taken to ensure that the information in this booklet is accurate at the time of publication. Please note that inclusion of a service in this directory does not imply any endorsement or association of that service by Cancer Council ACT. This booklet provides a list of services and organisations that may be of assistance to those affected by cancer and should not be considered exhaustive.

Introduction

This directory was developed as a guide to cancer services in the ACT for people with cancer, their carers, families and friends. It is also designed to be a resource for health professionals working in cancer care.

A diagnosis of cancer can pose many challenges. They can range from the practical, like how to get to a medical appointment, to the emotionally complex, like thinking about life and death. The services listed in this directory can help with many of these challenges.

Many of these services are also available to family, friends and carers.

If you would like more details about any of the services listed in this directory, or are looking for a service that is not listed, contact Cancer Council's Information and Support line on 13 11 20 or email cancer.information@actcancer.org. This service complements the care provided by your treatment team and is available Monday–Friday, 9am–5pm.

An electronic version of this directory is also available on Cancer Council ACT's website www.actcancer.org. This online version is kept up to date as we become aware of any changes.

If you or your family have any questions or concerns, call Cancer Council 13 11 20. We can send you more information and connect you with support services in your area.

Cancer Information and Support

Cancer Council 13 11 20

Our experienced health professionals can provide information and support on any aspect of cancer as well as connect you to a range of suitable services.

Cancer information

We provide a range of free booklets and fact sheets on cancer types, cancer treatment, living with cancer and living well after cancer. Each resource is regularly reviewed by cancer experts so you can be confident that you are receiving the most up to date information.

Cancer education programs

Our free education programs for people with cancer and their family and friends, help you learn more about cancer and give you the opportunity to meet others in a similar situation. They cover a range of topics including cancer and its treatments, living with cancer, survival skills and how to cope.

Legal, financial and workplace advice

We provide people affected by cancer with access to free legal, financial, workplace and small business advice if they cannot afford to pay for it.

We can also help to find community and government resources that may be able to help financially.

Wig service

Losing your hair as a result of cancer treatment is challenging for many people. Our Wig Service stocks a range of new and pre-loved wigs, and turbans for sale at affordable prices. Call our office to book an appointment.

CCACT Wig Service

Cancer support groups

Support groups provide a safe place for people affected by cancer to talk to others in a similar situation in a confidential and supportive environment. Cancer Council offers a range of support groups, these may be face-to-face, online or over the phone.

Peer support

If you'd like to speak with someone who's had a similar experience, our Cancer Connect program can match you with a trained volunteer who has been through the same or similar diagnosis and treatment.

There is also a professionally moderated online support community where people affected by cancer can find, receive and provide support by participating in groups, discussions, blogs and webinars.

Looking for a specialist

Cancer Council Australia has developed a web-based directory of specialists at cancer.org.au/cancer-information/after-a-diagnosis/find-a-specialist to make it easy to find a doctor who specialises in a particular field of cancer treatment.

Palliative Care

Palliative care aims to help people with a life-limiting illness to live as fully and comfortably as possible. It involves a range of services offered by doctors, nurses and allied health professionals, as well as volunteers and carers, who work together to meet a person's physical, practical, emotional and spiritual needs, as well as providing support to family and friends.

Palliative care is offered in different settings, depending on the situation. It can be provided at home, in a residential aged-care facility, in a hospital or in a palliative care unit.

Advance Care Planning - ACT

Managing your digital legacy

If you use social media, such as Facebook, Twitter and Instagram, you will need to think about what happens to your accounts after your death. Each social media platform has different rules for deactivating accounts, while some allow your account to be turned into a memorial page. It is a good idea to leave a list of all your accounts, passwords and instructions with someone you trust, so they can manage your ongoing digital presence according to your wishes.

Visit the settings section of your social media platforms to get up-to-date information on what options are currently available.

Cancer information

Cancer Council produces booklets, factsheets, podcasts and CDs covering a range of topics including cancer types, treatment, side effect management, advanced cancer and practical, legal and financial issues. These resources are reviewed regularly in consultation with leading health professionals and topic experts. They are available to read or download at actcancer.org call 13 11 20 to order a free copy.

Telephone information

Genetics and risk

While most cases of cancer are not due to a history of cancer in the family, for a small number of people, their family history suggests they may have a genetic risk. This means their chance of developing cancer is potentially higher than the average population. The family doctor is the best place to discuss concerns and determine if a referral for genetic counselling is required. These services provide information and support for patients and their families with or at risk of developing an inherited health condition.

Emotional support

You may find that you are dealing with a wide range of emotions after a cancer diagnosis. Finding ways to manage your feelings and reactions is important to your physical and emotional wellbeing. Many people with cancer find that talking to a professional counsellor can be helpful. Others find comfort in a cancer support group, or talking to an individual who has had cancer themselves.

Carers of people with cancer may find many of these services helpful. Carers can also check the entries under Support for Carers.

Cancer support groups

Cancer support groups offer a safe place for people with cancer to talk with others who have had similar experiences. Support groups may offer emotional, social and some practical support as well as information on cancer and related issues. Each support group is unique in what they provide.

There are a range of support groups operating in the ACT that are not run by Cancer Council ACT. These groups are either led by community members and/or health professionals and the views expressed by these support groups are the views of the support groups and are not necessarily those of Cancer Council ACT. The following is a list of support groups that have provided contact details to Cancer Council ACT. We recommend you contact the group directly to decide whether it may be suitable for your needs.
